Introduction

GRADY AND O'GRADY

The Grady Family of North Carolina descended directly from William Grady, who emigrated from Donegal County, Ireland, sometime near the close of the 17th. Century, and settled first in Bertie County. He married Anne, daughter of Richard Barfield of Virginia, and is supposed to have moved into Lenoir County (Dobbs), sometime about the year 1730, or later, where he died. Little is known of this first of the Grady family in North Carolina. We have no record of any child except JOHN, who was born in 1704, and died in 1787. This John Grady married Mary, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Goodman) Whitfield, and in 1739, moved on to a tract of land in the fork of Burncoat Creek and North East River, in Duplin County, where he lived, died, and was buried.

John Grady and Mary had a large family: Mary, William, John, Charity, Anne, Alexander, Lewis, Elizabeth, Margaret, Frederick, and perhaps others, from whom have descended all of the Grady Clan in Duplin and Lenoir Counties. His daughter Elizabeth married James Outlaw, and from this union practically all of the Outlaws of Duplin County sprang.

The original tract of land acquired by John Grady is still in the family, and contains the site of the present B. F. GRADY HIGH SCHOOL, near the residence of William Gaston Kornegay, who is a lineal descendant of John Grady through his grandmother, Susan, who was a daughter of Henry Grady, and a great grand daughter of John Grady.

The name was originally Gradha, and is allied to the Latin word, gradus, a step or stairway, and means noble or ambitious. The letter "h" was finally dropped and the name was spelled G-r-a-d-a. O'Grady means a descendant of Grady; McGrady or MacGrady, means a son of Grady, and we find these names in various parts of the world at this time. The family originated in South Ireland, but the immediate ancestors of the North Carolina family lived in County Donegal, North Ireland. They were Protestants.

John Rooney in his Genealogical History of Irish Families, 1895, makes the following statement:

"The O'Grady family is descended from Milesius, King of Spain, through the line of Heber, third son of that Monarch. The O'Gradys belong to the Dal Cais tribe, thus uniting the blood of both Heber and Heremon. The founders of the family were Brian Boru, King of Ireland, A. D. 1002, and Moriartach O'Brian, last King of Ireland of the race of Heber, A. D. 1089. The ancient name was Gradha, signifying "Noble." The title of the Chiefs of the Gradys was Prince of Dongaile and Aniaholiah, and their possessions were located in the Counties of Mayo, Kerry, Limerick, and Clare. Their territory in the latter County comprised the present Barony of Lower Tullagh. The O'Gradys are thus designated by O'Herring:

"O'Grada took the entire lands
Of the profitable Kinel Dongali;
His swords, yellow hafted, are keen,
Strong are the blows of his forces in battle."

Many of the chiefs of this clan were men of note, and the family has produced many men of learning. Augustin MacGrady, born about the middle of the fourteenth century, was an annalist of note, having continued the "Annals of Tighernach" from that annalist's time to the year of his own death, a period of nearly three hundred years, thereby preserving much valuable historical material. In 1831, Hon. Standish O'Grady, Chief Baron of the Exchequer in Ireland, was created Viscount Guillamore.

Another prominent member of the family was Harry Deane Grady, of the Irish Bar, a contemporary and friend of Daniel O'Connell, and noted for his native wit. O'Connell related this story of his friend:

A certain Irish Judge by the name of Boyd, who was rarely sober on the Bench, was so fond of brandy that he always kept a supply of it on his desk in a peculiar make of inkstand. His Lordship would lean upon the desk, bob his head down, and sip the liquor through a quill that lay among his pens, which maneuver he thought escaped the attention of the Court officials and members of the Bar. One day it was sought by counsel to have a witness convicted of having been intoxicated at a certain time, and thereby discredit his testimony. Harry Deane Grady labored hard to show that the witness was sober on that occasion. Finally the Judge said: "Come now, my good man, it is a very important consideration. Tell the Court truly; were you drunk or sober on that occasion?" Grady immediately replied, without waiting for the witness, "O, he was quite sober, my Lord. As sober as a Judge!" And he looked significantly at the inkstand on the Judge's desk.

Standish O'Grady, the most distinguished Irish writer of fiction of the present day, is a descendant of this family. The late Henry Woodfin Grady of Atlanta, a brilliant writer and orator, was a descendant of old John Grady. Dr. Joseph O'Grady of Brooklyn, N. Y., is also a member of the same clan; and in every department of life—law, medicine, art, sciences, and statesmanship,—they have excelled.

The only man killed at the Battle of Moore's Creek Bridge, February, 27, 1776, on the American side, was private John Grady, and a monument stands today upon the Battlefield in commemoration of his heroism. Members of this family have participated actively in every War since the United States Government was created; in the Revolution, the War of 1812, the Mexican War, the War Between The States, the Spanish-American War, and the great World War of 1918. They have filled important positions in the State, and have at all times shown themselves worthy of trust.

The Gradys of North Carolina have always called the name Graddy. In an old Deed made in 1725, from Richard Barfield and wife to their grandson, John Grady, the name is spelled G-r-a-d-d-y. This Deed is recorded in the County of Bertie. In his Last Will and Testament, John Grady spelled his name with two "ds," thus showing that the name has always been pronounced that way in North Carolina.

From BURKE'S General Armory, p. 752, we copy the following:

"O'Grady, or Grady.

The O'Grady, Kilballyowen Co., Limerick formerly Chiefs of Cinel-Dunghalle, a district comprising the present parishes of Tomgraney, Co. Clare, and Iniscaltra and Clonrush, Co. Galway; the Four Masters record that under A. D. 1184, CENFAOLADH O'GRADA, of Tuaim Grene, died; DONALD O'GRADA, The O'Grady, fell in battle A. D. 1309, leaving a son, Hugh O'Grada, who obtained the lands of Kilballyowen that in year in marriage with the daughter and heiress of O'Kerwick, Chief of Aniah Cliah, which has continued the residence of the chieftains ever since; THOMAS DE COURCY O'GRADY, The O'Grady, succeeded his father as Chieftain in 1783.

The following genealogy of the Grady family, was compiled by Benjamin Grady of Washington City, a son of Benjamin Franklin Grady, son of Alexander Outlaw Grady, son of Henry Grady, son of Alexander Grady, son of John Grady, son of William Grady, the original immigrant to America.

It is as correct as it is possible to compile at this time. Many of the old records have been lost, and this Genealogy has been a work of great care, involving much labor, and endless detail. It is presented to the family by my brother in the hope that it may revive an interest in the early history of the State, and in the heroic deeds of our early ancestors who have helped to make the State what it is today.

Any information relative to the family should be sent to him at his home address: 1775 Massachusetts Avenue, N. W., Washington City, D. C.

The following Poem was written by Judge Henry A. Grady, and read by him at the GRADY-OUTLAW Reunion, at the B. F. GRADY High School in Albertson Township, Duplin County, N. C., August, 29, 1930. The Poem is commemorative of that part of Duplin County which was originally settled by the Gradys and Outlaws in the early part of the eighteenth Century. The territory lies in the fork of the North East River and Burncoat Creek and extends northwardly to the Wayne County line. It has always been called Chocolate, but the origin of the name is unknown.

The Gradys came from Donegal County, Ireland, which country the Milesians called Innisfail—The Isle of Destiny.

CHOCOLATE

From Donegal in Innisfail,
Where Banshees toll the dead;
From the barren hills of Derryneagh,
Where the Storm King spits his icy spray,
Our rude forefathers fled;
From Goblin's strike and Phantom's spell,
From Spook and Sprite they came,
To a Land of Peace, on the old North East,
Where Fortune smiled as the years increased,
And they gave to the Land a name.

Have you heard of the land called "CHOCOLATE,"
Where peaches and apples grow,
Where the scuppernong and the muscadine
Their luscious fruits were wont to twine,
In the days of long ago;
Where the gentle pace of a kindly race
Like a sweet brook murmured on;
With never a thought in the ways of sin,
Where all of the men and the women were kin,
And the folks all called me John?

I will sing you a song of Chocolate,
Of the land that we love so well,
Where peace and plenty have ever increased,
In the fertile fields of the old North East,
Where the Gradys and Outlaws dwell;
Where the Chat makes love to the Mockingbird
In the twilight groves of June,

And the Chuck-Will tunes his speckled throat
To the Whippoorwill in the woods remote,
By the light of the wandering Moon.

I will sing you a song of a happy land,
Of the land of my kith and kin;
Where I romped as a child on the old North East,
When the Earth was warm, and the years increased,
With their Dream-Ships sailing in;
Where the Setting Sun with its Golden Fleece,—
All radiant in the West,—
Like the Natal Star, where the Manger lay,
Gave promise to me of a better day,
To the land that we love best.

In days that are old and forgotten,
By Burncoat's Eastern side,
JOHN GRADY of old laid claim to "The Fork,"
Where he builded a Hut and invited the Stork,
To Mary, his Whitfield bride;
While up to the North in Chocolate,
JAMES OUTLAW staked his claim,
Where he builded a bridge for his wide demesne,
On the old North East, as many have seen,
And he gave to the bridge his name.

Then the Stork took John at his bidding,
And out of eleven by name,
Old James took Betsy to Outlaw's Bridge,
Where their children played by the water's edge,—
Eleven there were, that came.
Then Grady took Outlaw in marriage,
And Outlaw took Grady to wed,
Till the Land of Peace on the Old North East,
Like Israel bloomed, when his tribes increased,—
When the Gradys and Outlaws spread.

And then to the land called Chocolate,—
The land that we love so well,—
The Maxwells came in the early days,
With their Houston blood and their gaellic ways
Where the Gradys and Outlaws dwell;
And they took them wives of the Gradys,
They cast their lot with the clan;
They grew apace, with a friendly race,

Grew big and strong in the sweat of the face,
As only a brave man can.

Then Simmons came up out of Craven,—
A German Bavarian bred,—
With the blood of Kornegay and Hargett he came,
And Simon by birth became Simmons by name;
And he took him a Grady to wed.
Then his sons took the daughters of Chocolate,
His daughters took men of the Clan;
His pastures were broad, and his acres were long,
And the tribe of the Teuton waxed happy and strong;
For Simmons was much of a man.

Then Outlaw and Maxwell and Simmons,
Kornegay and Grady unite;—
The mandate of God to replenish the Earth,
They took as their motto for all it was worth;
They tackled their task with a might.
And the name of their children is legion,
They labor by land and by Sea;
And whether the problem be great or small,
The blood of our fathers has answered the call;—
Has answered for you, and for me.

And now in the land called Chocolate,
The land that we love so well,
They all claim kin by common grant;
And when it's not cousin, it's uncle or aunt,
Where the Gradys and Outlaws dwell.
And their blood: May it prosper forever,
As pure as the morning dew;
May its purple sheen shine clear and clean,
With never a blot that's base or mean,
While it flows through me, and you.

To that Land of Peace on the Old North East
My sweetest memories cling;
To the old School House on the wooded hill,
By Sutton's Branch, with its shady rill,
Where the children learned to sing;
To the Sunday School that my father taught,
With his Wherefore, Why, and How;
And it seems to me that the Sabbath Day,
At Sutton's Branch, where we used to play,
Was holier then, than now.

And it seems to me that the songs we sang,
To my father's measured beat,
Were sweeter by far than the Hymns today,
That the surpliced choirs in the Chancels play;—
So simple, and yet, so sweet.
When "Cool Siloams's Shady Rill"
In solemn anthem rose,
With "Sing Them Over Again To Me,"
Sweet "Beulah Land" and "Galilee,"
God heard us, and He knows.

And I know in the Great Hereafter,
When EDEN'S Belfry tolls,
And the Angels stand on either hand,
And sing the songs of their native land,
While the Big Pipe Organ rolls;
That the little band from Chocolate
Will sing so sweet and clear,
That even Israfil will smile,
And stay his hand for a little while,
That he himself may hear.

And I know when the Doom Book opens,
And the last Judge takes His seat;
When the charge is read, and the rites are said,
And the naked souls of the quickened dead
Stand mute at the Master's feet;
That the sons of John will shout aloud,
And the sons of James will sing,
"Hosannah! for the Lord is Good!
Hear all ye Saints on Holy Rood,
The Judgment of the King!"

I have sung you a song of Chocolate,
Of the land of peace and joy;
Of the folks I knew in the olden days,
Of the things we did in the golden days,
When I was a barefoot boy;
Where the gentle pace of a kindly race
Like a sweet brook murmured on;
With never a thought in the ways of sin,
Where all of the men and the women were kin,
And the folks all called me John.

Then Here's to the land called Chocolate;
To the land that we love so well;

To the gentle vales where the hills divide,
A happy land by the River's side,
Where the Gradys and Outlaws dwell;
Where neighbor calls upon neighbor,
With a faith that's tried and true;
Where the blood of John and James runs clean,
With never a blot that's base or mean;
So I leave the message with you.

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

The history of the United States is a story of growth and change. From the first settlers to the present day, the nation has evolved through various stages of development. The early years were marked by exploration and settlement, followed by a period of rapid expansion and growth. The American Revolution was a pivotal moment in the nation's history, leading to the establishment of a new government and the declaration of independence. The 19th century was a time of great change, with the Civil War and the Reconstruction era shaping the nation's future. The 20th century has been a period of great achievement, with the United States becoming a world superpower and a leader in many fields.

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

The first part of the history of the United States of America is the period from the discovery of the continent by Christopher Columbus in 1492 to the establishment of the first permanent English colony in 1607. This period is characterized by the exploration of the continent by various European powers, including Spain, France, and the Netherlands, and the establishment of a number of small, isolated settlements.

The second part of the history of the United States of America is the period from 1607 to 1776. This period is characterized by the growth of the colonies, the development of a distinct American identity, and the struggle for independence from British rule. The colonies began to assert their rights as separate entities, and the British government's attempts to impose control led to a series of conflicts that culminated in the American Revolution.

The third part of the history of the United States of America is the period from 1776 to 1865. This period is characterized by the establishment of the new nation, the development of a federal system of government, and the struggle to resolve the issue of slavery. The American Revolution led to the creation of the United States Constitution, which established the framework for the new government. The issue of slavery, however, remained a major point of contention, and it was not until the Civil War that it was finally resolved.

The fourth part of the history of the United States of America is the period from 1865 to 1945. This period is characterized by the Reconstruction era, the Gilded Age, the Progressive Era, and the Great Depression. The Reconstruction era was a period of significant change, as the newly freed slaves were integrated into the American society. The Gilded Age was a period of rapid economic growth and industrialization, but it was also a time of social inequality and corruption. The Progressive Era was a period of reform, as various groups sought to address the problems of the Gilded Age. The Great Depression was a period of severe economic hardship, which led to the New Deal and the eventual entry of the United States into World War II.

The fifth part of the history of the United States of America is the period from 1945 to the present. This period is characterized by the Cold War, the Civil Rights Movement, and the Vietnam War. The Cold War was a period of tension between the United States and the Soviet Union, which shaped much of the world's politics. The Civil Rights Movement was a period of struggle for equality, as African Americans fought for their rights. The Vietnam War was a period of conflict, which ended in 1975. The United States has continued to play a major role in the world, and its history remains a subject of great interest and debate.

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

The history of the United States is a story of growth and change. From the first settlers to the present day, the nation has evolved through various stages of development. The early years were marked by exploration and settlement, followed by a period of rapid expansion and industrialization. The American Revolution was a pivotal moment in the nation's history, leading to the establishment of a new government and the declaration of independence. The 19th century was a time of great change, with the Civil War being a major event that shaped the nation's future. The 20th century has been a period of significant progress, with the United States becoming a world power and a leader in many fields.

The United States has a rich and diverse culture, with many different ethnic groups and traditions. The country has been shaped by the contributions of many different people, and it continues to be a place of great opportunity and innovation. The American dream is a powerful idea that has inspired many people around the world, and it remains a central part of the nation's identity.

The United States has a long and proud history, and it continues to be a place of great hope and possibility. The nation's values of freedom, democracy, and equality are the foundation of its identity, and they continue to guide the country's development. The American people are a resilient and determined people, and they have the power to shape the future of the nation.

The United States is a country of many firsts, and it has many more to come. The nation's history is a story of progress and achievement, and it is a story that continues to inspire and motivate people around the world. The American dream is a powerful idea that has shaped the nation's identity, and it remains a central part of the country's future.

The United States is a country of great opportunity and innovation, and it has the power to shape the future of the world. The nation's values of freedom, democracy, and equality are the foundation of its identity, and they continue to guide the country's development.
